Key Ingredients:

Polypeptides are chains of amino acids that are the building blocks of proteins in the skin. When peptides form a long chain of amino acids, they become proteins. When they are in a short chain of amino acids, they are able to penetrate the top layer of our skin and send signals to our cells to let them know how to function. One important protein in our skin is collagen. Collagen gives our skin its thickness and suppleness. When collagen breaks down in the skin (from age and environmental factors like the sun and stress), wrinkles form. Polypeptides applied topically to the skin can send a signal to collagen to prompt the formation of new collagen and suddenly you have the appearance of more youthful, supple skin.

Resveratrol is a remarkable advancement in anti-aging skin care applications for skin resilience, reductions in fine lines and improvement in skin tone. As part of the group polyphenols this wrinkle reducing peptide has been showing great improvements for minimizing pores, reducing wrinkles and working as an antioxidant for the skin. Produced through fermentation of the small molecule, resveratrol, with the microorganism, Pichia pastoris, this innovative biotechnological ingredient is a highly effective ingredient for use in anti-aging skin creams and serums.
